Tonight was indeed a highlight of my educational career. My student, Eric, named me his STAR Teacher. He is a fine young man, and going on this journey with him has been an honor. Such a joy!

But as I listened (and live Tweeted) the comments made by students about their STAR teachers, some common elements kept coming up about the STAR Teachers as being:

- Passionate about their subject
- A person who sees students as people and cares about them outside the classroom
- A person who helps them see their future
- A person who pushes the students
- Making the subject relevant to the student's lives
- Seeing something in students they didn't see in themselves
- Caring about students and wanting them to collaborate and enjoy learning
- Asking about students and caring how they are doing
- Inspiring powerful conversations.
